Council sets public hearing on fire merger for Nov. 1

by Lindy Magner

Tuesday night the City Council agreed to hold a public hearing Nov. 1 on a possible merger between the fire departments of Lemon Grove and La Mesa.

Several weeks ago, the councils of both cities met jointly to hear a consultant's report on the feasibility of such a merger. The consultant, Richard Brady of Hughes, Heiss & Associates recommended that Lemon Grove contract with La Mesa for fire service through an arrangement which would give the smaller city shared control of the fire department's budget.

Though the La Mesa City Council was ready to give conceptual approval to the merger at the Sept. 13 joint meeting, Lemon Grove stalled, with the council feeling it should hold a public meeting first, to better gauge how its constituents, as well as firefighters, felt about such a merger.

Tuesday night, City Manager Doug Yount informed the council that if it wished not to pursue the merger issue further, it should now direct him to drop the issue. Council responded that it would like staff to gather more information on the merger, and hold a public meeting to gain community input.

Councilman Tom Clabby said that though he has numerous questions not addressed by the consultant's proposal, he is open to the merger concept.

"I'm very open to negotiations; if the people feel this is best for Lemon Grove, then I'll support it," he said.

Councilman Jerry Legerton said that further study is "worth the energy," adding that he would like a staff report to not only analyze the current benefits of a merger, but also explore the future implications.

Councilwoman Mary Sessom expressed concern that notice of the public meeting may not reach enough community members.

"This is a controversial issue and there needs to a lot of community education about this," she said.

Yount said he would proceed with researching questions submitted to him by several council members, though noting that some questions could probably only be answered when the two cities begin negotiating a contract.

He said that if after the Nov. 1 meeting, council still wishes to pursue the merger, the two cities should form an "implementation committee" to explore consolidation concerns and issues such as fiscal control, the sharing of costs and operating procedures. In about two months, the committee would complete its investigation and report its findings to each city council, Yount said. Based on this information, the cities would then decide whether or not to implement a merger.

Yount said he recently met with the Lemon Grove Firefighters Association, the results of which he will report at the Nov. 1 meeting.

According to Jim Ek, spokesperson for the firefighters association, the association conducted surveys both a year ago and just recently, to determine if firefighters favored the merger.

He said that the earlier survey showed a 78.5 percent approval rate, while the recent survey, conducted after the Sept. 13 joint meeting, showed an 80 percent approval rate of the proposed merger.

At the Sept. 13 meeting, several council members disagreed with the consultant's comment that most Lemon Grove firefighters approved of the merger.

Ek said the association decided to conduct another survey to clearly determine the opinion of firefighters.

Among the 20 percent which did not support the merger were those who based their opposition simply on not having enough information about the merger, Ek said. Concerns listed by firefighters include La Mesa's financial problems as well as one of the study's alternatives which would decrease manned truck units at the Lemon Grove station from three to two firefighters.

Mayor Bob Burns and Councilman Craig Lake were absent from the meeting.

The breakfast runs from 7:30 to 10:30 a.m., with other activities beginning at 10 a.m. at the station, located at the corner of Central/Lincoln.

The six candidates for three positions on the Lemon Grove School Board presented their views Monday night at a candidate forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Grossmont-Cajon Valley and the Lemon Grove PTA Council at the Lemon Grove Community Center.

While the small crowd, composed primarily of PTA members, school district employees and council members (present and former) heard few surprises, the format gave them opportunity to submit questions to the moderator, Barbara Collis, for the candidates to answer. The candidates were given the opportunity to make an opening statement, after which Collis jumped right into the questions from the audience.

Right out of the box, the candidates were hit with questions on the controversial CLAS test and vouchers. And immediately, Richard Schult was the only candidate to agree with Gov. Wilson's veto of further funding for the CLAS test, stating that he felt it was too intrusive in the student's personal life. The other candidates varied only slightly, with all feeling that with little or no changes, the test was a valuable tool. When asked whether or not they favored a voucher system, only Schult stated that he had supported Proposition 174, the Voucher initiative that was defeated two years ago. He added that even in its defeat, the threat of a voucher system had brought about greater openness and change.

The candidates were then asked whether or not they agreed that since the state had not granted any cost of living adjustments (COLAs) for four years, that the board should grant COLAs to its employees, nevertheless. While most agreed with the board's action on this, Mike Ott, who as a Lemon Grove fireman saw his pay frozen while the city suffered through a period of loss of funds to state government, felt that the board needed to look for other sources of revenue (such as grants), so it could free up funds to grant COLAs. While not directly responding to the COLA question, George Gastil proposed forming an educational foundation to raise funds for the district.

Helix grad a 'rising star'

by Lindy Magner

Winners in last Saturday's Catch a Rising Star talent contest sponsored by the La Jolla Stage Co. included a 17-year-old Helix High School graduate from Lemon Grove and a 42-year-old trucking company supervisor from Lakeside.

Both are vocalists; Wesley North won the grand prize for his age division, 7 to 17, and Christopher Tanner won second prize in the age 18 to 60 division.

North, who began singing only a few years ago, said he was stunned that he won, especially since he was suffering with a cold which lowered his vocal range.

Auditions for the event began during the summer, and North's singing qualified him as one of 80 semifinalists who would be judged as they performed in four different public shows featuring actors, dancers and vocalists.

However, shortly after the audition, he lost his voice and thought he was done in.

"I get these chest colds whenever the weather changes, and they deplete my range from that of a tenor to a baritone. I no longer had the range necessary to perform the song I'd auditioned with, so they let me use another song for the semifinals."

His performance of "Stars" from "Les Miserable," wowed the judges, though North felt at the time that his three competitors had outperformed him.

"It was a hard competition which I felt I wasn't really ready for," he said, noting that last year, he entered the same contest as part of a duet, but failed to qualify for the semifinals, though he and his partner had won third place in the Southern California Talent Contest.

North said his goals are musical, and though making it bigtime as a singer would be great, he'll put his efforts into becoming a high school music director.

He said his experiences as part of Helix High School's show choir ensemble, "Guys & Dolls," formed his career goal.

"Our music director was so noticeable on campus - everyone knew him and he got a lot of praise - and the harmony he created with our group was amazing. That's what I'd like to do," he said, noting that he is now attending Grossmont College and hopes to major in music at a four-year college in the near future.

North is in the cast - as a member of the chorus - of Christian Community Theatre's (CCT) production of "Hello, Dolly!" which will open soon. He also had a minor musical role as a farmer in CCT"s production of "Oklahoma!" two years ago.

Tanner, whose early musical aspirations were put on hold while he worked a steady job to support his family, said it is now time for him to put his talent to the test. In his high school days at Granite Hills, he sang in choirs and with a folk music group.

In 1970, his solo vocal performance won him first place in the Youth for Christ talent contest.

However, a musical career seemed impractical for a man with young children, he said.

"Now that the kids are grown, it's my turn," he said, noting that two of his sons have theatrical talents.

His eldest son Jon, a Grossmont College student, has the lead in the Pine Valley Player's current musical production, "Big River," while his son Jerad, a Granite Hills senior, is the choreographer for that same show.

Tanner himself had a major singing role in the Pine Hills Players' production of "Paint Your Wagon."

For the last few years, he has been one of the performers of the National Anthem home games of the San Diego Padres, and he plans to audition more agressively for local musical productions.

"I think my goal would be to do musical comedy; there are lots of wonderful things happening in San Diego, and I'm just gearing up," he said.

This was the first time he had auditioned for the Catch A Rising Star contest which he calls a "wonderful experience." His prize was $50 and La Jolla Stage Co. season tickets; North won $300 and season tickets.

This was the third year of the contest which according to a La Jolla Stage Co. spokesperson, attracts talent scouts from Los Angeles who can "see a lot of talent in a little time."

Crossing-guard program hits financial roadblock

Several months ago, a group consisting of community members and school district representatives began meeting to put forth a program to place crossing guards at several of the district's elementary schools. They hoped it would be funded partly by the business community, as well as through school district and city funds.

However, convincing local businesses to donate $200 or so for the program proved too much of a stumbling block, and the group has decided that the program will enlist volunteer rather than paid crossing guards.

According to Michael Dupray, whose concern about elementary school students crossing busy streets with only the aid of student patrols was the impetus for a crossing guard program, the group will be meeting Oct. 13 with the district's PTA Council to request their participation in a volunteer program.

Each school's volunteer coordinator would be responsible for recruiting and scheduling volunteers.

Dupray said the group's efforts to solicit business donations proved less than fruitful, and those few donations made will be returned.

"With the bad economy, businesses are really hurting; I went around to a lot of businesses, and received few donations," Dupray said.

Skyline's 40 years

Congratulations and thanks to the Skyline Wesleyan Church for 40 years of service and Christian influence in Lemon Grove. On Aug. 21, a celebration was held to a packed house (capacity 1100) in the church on Skyline Drive, near Jamacha Road.

The main recipient of well-deserved accolades was Pastor Orval C. Butcher who founded the congregation in July 1954. After 27 years he retired, leaving the reins to Dr. John Maxwell who presides today. If there ever were an ecclesiastical Horatio Alger story, it would have to be his story in the genesis of the very large congregation on Skyline Drive.

The beginning of the church preceded our coming to Lemon Grove by one year, so it was our privilege to know many of the old-timers both as clergy and as members of the congregation who were clients of the Lemon Grove Veterinary Hospital.

Present were Jimmy Johnson and Otis Skillings who were valued members of the Lemon Grove Kiwanis Club. Reverend Dale Bailey was a member of our original City Council, and Derric Johnson was a musical power in Lemon Grove from the beginning. I think he has more rhythm than Mel Torme, and he demonstrated that talent at the celebration, returning from Disney World for just this event.

At one point, at least half of those seated in the pews, got up and went up on stage to sing their hearts out. It is really inspiring to see full-blown joy on the faces of people who are totally imbued with the spirit and meaning of a song when they sing. Every voice was full and every face was radiantly smiling in song as they were transfixed with Derric Johnson's conducting leadership.

Not being a member of the Skyline Wesleyan congregation, I have to say that it is certainly one of the two great churches in Lemon Grove. They have set tremendous records in gaining membership, in catering to the youth, and in bringing fun into the praise and adoration of God. It would do all denominations well to emulate them in these areas to a greater degree.

I was privileged to be invited to attend the ceremony and can report that good things are emanating from Skyline Church. Pastor John Maxwell has put together a staff that is just doing excellent things in his ministry. They have missionaries and ministries in many parts of the world, as well as here in the United States. He says, "The greatness of a church is not measured by how many come in, but by how many people are sent out." The total worship attendance was 951 in 1970, and it is over 3,000 today. What is remarkable is that there is such a mix of enjoyment, fulfillment and friendship, and an all-inclusiveness in the practice of Christian worship. And, it is manifest in the progress of the church over the past 40 years.

Lemon Grove has benefited spiritually, morally and socially from the presence of the Skyline Wesleyan Church over the 40 years. Thanks to Pastor Butcher, Pastor Maxwell, and all of the staff, we say "well done" and thanks from all of us.

Personally, I am thankful for all religions that sincerely believe in the golden rule and that if we all followed it we would have no need for a constitution or laws of any kind. The 10 Commandments are right in any language, or in any house of worship, or in the hearts of men.

We who worship God, do so in our own preferred way. We should appreciate each other's manner in doing so, and following His lead.

Concert series continues at local church

The Musical Afternoons concert series of the Lemon Grove Congregational United Church of Christ will feature "Steve Baker Live" on Sunday, Oct. 16 , 3 p.m. at the church, 2770 Glebe Road.

A donation of $5 is suggested.

Dancing with Barney

by Paul Treske

I have never been called paranoid nor imagined myself mysteriously pursued, but these days I must admit that I feel increasingly hemmed in by the ever-increasing proliferation of television talk shows.

Unlike some of my more intellectual friends who profess only to watch KPBS and CNN and attend nothing but foreign films, I enjoy TV. There are certain ongoing series that I enjoy regularly and I watch at least three hours of news programs daily.

I do not watch any of the so-called talk shows - not one. I plan not to view any of them in the future, no matter who the host might be. But they are taking up more and more of each day's television schedule and worse, far worse, they are now so heavily advertised that there is simply no escaping them if one continues to watch the tube.

The inspiration for writing this came from a brief CBS plug for the Donahue Show. Showing Phil dancing with Barney, the purple dinosaur. I frankly didn't know whether to laugh or cry.

But, at least it was laughable. Most of these programs consist of a so-called "host" who interviews "guests" or "panelists" afflicted with the problem of the day. Donahue might have "married transvestites seeking divorces" while Ricki Lake features "men and women who despise each other" or "unfaithful husbands confessing to their wives."

The sight and sound of people apparently without shame or embarrassment (or frequently, brains, for that matter) rolling in the figurative dirt with each other for audience enjoyment is stomach-turning. So I don't watch.

But between every ordinary program I do watch are previews of this or that talk show with enough grub and groveling to send me running for the remote.

One wonders what possesses people to appear on these programs. Of course, here and there, you will find a legitimate discussion of an elevated subject, but most are disgusting and one suspects that those "ordinary citizens" on display are either actors or well-paid talk show "professionals," always available for another roll in the mud.

On the other hand, there is a raft of folks out there for whom a brief TV appearance under almost any circumstances is a Warholian 15 minutes of fame. You often see them during street interviews, waving and mugging frantically in the background.

All in all, between the seemingly endless talk shows and their sleazy cousins, the tabloid shows such as Current Affair, Hard Copy and Maury Povich, TV prior to prime time has become scarcely watchable and a sad commentary on what America enjoys watching.

I don't watch them, but I really resent, on a commercial break during Northern Exposure, having to see a promo clip of old Phil arguing with pedophiles or dancing with Barney. As I said at the outset - they're closing in on me!

PG Perspectives

Behind the times

by Phillip Giannangeli

Maybe I'm too old fashioned for these fast paced times. While the here-and-now is zipping on by me, I'm still trying to get a good hold on the there-and-then. Perhaps, I just didn't get all the right mental gear to deal with some of this modern stuff.

One of the here-and-nows that I'm really having trouble with has to do with driving a car. I can remember when I first learned how to drive a car, the watchword was "concentration." Complete and total. You got behind that wheel and you paid attention to driving. Nothing else. After all, these were huge chunks of steel and rubber hurtling down the road at pretty good speeds and that alone, it would seem, should require one's undivided attention. One's mind wasn't supposed to wander from the very important task at hand: guiding the car safely.

Today, the driving part of driving a car is anything but serious for some folks. That seat behind the steering wheel has become a convenient place for a variety of activities that are in no way related to the driving of a car. There are many so called drivers who have turned the driver's seat into a first-class, little breakfast nook. Clamps, trays and holders provide all the convenience of eating at home - even if home is rapidly disappearing in the rearview mirror. Munching on something gooey while balancing a hot drink may not seem dangerous but wait until it's tried at 60 miles per hour.

Some drivers utilize their time behind the wheel for make-overs. Speeding down the freeway or negotiating city streets doesn't seem to interfere one bit with the application of make-up or the styling of hair. Think of the wizardry these people could perform if they were to use both hands for their artistic endeavors.

Finally, there are drivers, and I cringe using that word to describe some of these folks, who use a conveniently placed telephone while cruising along. They'll brag that they can book appointments or chase down clients without missing an off ramp. You can see much animation in some of them as they talk into that phone. They must be involved in big mergers or the buying and selling of huge blocks of stock. Often you'll even get to hear one of these phone junkies on the radio as he calls some talk show to make a point that just couldn't wait until the car was safely garaged.

Somehow I must have missed it when the rules changed and made it alright to do all these things while driving a car. I might have been out at the time teaching my niece how to drive safely.

Perhaps, there are people out there driving who are so darn important, or so incredibly busy or so astoundingly talented that they deserve special consideration. Should they not be allowed special exemptions from the ordinary rest of us? Maybe that's what I'm failing to grasp.

In the meantime, I drive along with my antiquated notions and limited intellect, shaking my head at these motorized Boeotians. Occasionally I'll offer a special greeting as one passes me on the wrong side or cuts in front of me. Gosh, I hope they don't think my gesture means they're number one.

Letter to the editor

Your pocket is being picked

At the Sept. 27, 1994 Lemon Grove City Council Workshop meeting the members voted to add a line-item on our property tax bill in the amount of $29.61+ annually to raise $254,000, the annual cost of joining a new $83 million regional communications network called "800-Mega-hertz" for fire and sheriff operations.

Whether this program has cost-effective value is arguable. Many cities, including La Mesa and El Cajon, are not joining. Our previous Mayor and council repeatedly rejected this proposal because of uncertain costs.

I'll not argue the merits of Lemon Grove joining the system. But this end-run around Proposition 13 by the also controversial creation of a "Community Service Area" (CSA) which is the mechanism for a taxing authority is insidious and reprehensible.

Legal or not, our City Council does not have to chisel an additional quarter million dollars from us. The General Fund revenues are $6.6 million per year, up from $5.4 million, largely because of Home Depot and Bob Baker Toyota contributing about $700,000/year to the city trough. But council members were persuaded by City Manager Doug Yount to "protect" the General Fund and use the CSA taxing vehicle.

Supervisor Dianne Jacobs and many others are openly opposed to the CSA funding concept unless it be put to a vote of the people.

Contact your City Council members and inform them you don't want another taxing authority on your property tax bill.

Salvation Army needs building

The Salvation Army is seeking a building to house the organization's Christmas program. After three Christmas seasons in the former J.C. Penney store at The Grove, The Army needs a new location.

The Salvation Army is hoping that a building owner or corporation will donate the use of a building during the critical October through December time frame. "We will need at least 20,000 square feet to do the job right," said Lt. Col. David P. Riley, divisional commander.

"We need all of that space for our food distribution warehouse, toy and joy distribution and Adopt-A-Family programs," he said.

Businesses or organizations interested in helping The Salvation Army should contact Victor Pinzon, at 239-8027, extension 280.

October Events

1. First SAT Preparation course started Oct. 4, and will continue for four Tuesdays this month and four Tuesdays in March. Registration for the classes is $35, which includes your materials and test booklets. For more information call the school and ask for Mrs. Irving or Mr. Ehlers.

2. Oct. 18-21 is Homecoming Week. Beginning the celebration is an assembly in the football field from 11 to 12 with teacher Mr. Funk or Principal Smith to kiss a pig. Also, there will be an Egyptian dress up week starting with Tuesday being Egyptian hat day, Wednesday Robe and sandal day, Thursday is Cleopatra day, and Friday is Mummy day. Also, on Friday Helix will play Vahalla, have a BBQ for $6 at 6 p.m., and fireworks at halftime. Nominees are TBA, at a later date. Lets make memories we will never forget and Vahalla will regret!

Senior choir offers surprise

by Lora Clark

The senior choir of the Lemon Grove First Baptist Church recently gave its third and final performance of "The Appointment," a dynamic, musical drama written specifically for older adults.

According to Dennis Ormsbee, music minister, the council of seniors had considered several musicals and found them to be too dull, too "senior."

"They wanted something lively," explained Ormsbee. "They told me that they may be seniors on the outside, but they're youngsters at heart. They wanted something that was energetic and enthusiastic."

Several of Omsbee's associates had told him about "The Appointment," a musical that is currently out-of-print. Ormsbee located a music company whose personnel dug around in their warehouse, unearthed the musical score, dusted it off, and mailed it to him. "It's a great musical!" exclaimed Ormsbee.

"It was well worth the effort it took to find it. It shows us how God used seniors during Old Testament times. The message is that God still uses seniors today and that great things can come if they will follow His leading."

"It takes us through all the stages of life and reminds us that the Lord has always been there - for the little things as well as the big ones," added Eva Edgil, choir member. "It emphasizes the can's and eliminates the can'ts!"

The first performance, July 17, was given at their home church. "The auditorium was packed," commented Ormsbee, "and I think our young people enjoyed it more than any other group. The musical is a lot of fun, and it deals with issues that are relevant to young people as well. Not only

In the Service

Army Spec. Steven R. Cardinalli stationed at Fort Bragg, Fayetteville, N. C. has been decorated with the Army Achievement Medal which is awarded to soldiers for meritorious service, acts of courage, or other outstanding accomplishments.

Cardinalli, a power generator mechanic, is the son of Barbara A. Dye of Lemon Grove, and Andrew S. Cardinalli of Tucson, Ariz.

He is a 1991 graduate of Mount Miguel High School.

Grandparents and Books program expands

New adult readers have joined the Grandparents and Books program at the Lemon Grove Library, adding more hours when readers will be present to read to children one-to-one or in small groups.

Readers are found in the children's section of the library and can be identified by a friendly face and a large, colorful button which identifies that person as part of the Grandparents and Books program.

At their scheduled times, the grandparent readers will have selected some new books and some old favorites from special shelves maintained for readers and they will be ready to share those books with the children or to read something that the children have selected themselves from the library shelves. We are especially pleased that several of the new readers are fluently bilingual in Spanish and English, providing enrichment we were not able to offer previously. The library has a good selection of current children's books written in Spanish.

Welcomed are Jesse Arguilez, Lois Heiserman, Lupe Silva, Dona Clabby, Annette Quintana. They join Doris Townsend and Mary Vinson, who started last spring, and Chuck LeRoy, who is now "on sabbatical" from the reading schedule.

Starting Oct. 3, the grandparent reading schedule will be as follows:

Tuesdays:
10:00-11:00 a.m.
11:00-noon (bilingual)
1:00 - 2:00 p.m.

Fridays:
10:00-11:00 a.m. (bilingual)
11:00-noon
2:00 - 3:00 p.m.

Thursdays:
10:00-11:00 a.m. (bilingual)
11:00-noon (bilingual)
1:00 - 2:00 p.m.
2:00 - 3:00 p.m.

Saturdays:
2:00 - 3:00 p.m.

The Grandparent reading program does not take the place of the regularly scheduled twice-a-month Storytimes which are presented by Sonya Heiserman, librarian, and attended by large groups of preschool children. Storytime is in the children's area of the library at 11 a.m. on the second and fourth Wednesdays of the month. The next scheduled Storytimes are Oct. 12 and Oct. 26.

Green candidates to hold movie

The eight Green Party candidates for local, nonpartisan office in East County will hold a combined campaign kick off and fund raiser featuring Jack Nicholson - on screen in "Chinatown."

The Green Party Night at the Movies has been subtitled "Developers Can Be Murder - Part I" and will be held at 7 p.m. Oct. 13 at Gloria's Gourmet Cafe at 9029 Campo Rd. in Casa de Oro.

Proceeds from the $5 tickets and the accompanying raffle will benefit the so-called "Green Team," which includes:

- Susan Wolfe-Fleming for Grossmont Union High School District Board. Wolfe-Fleming came in third place in 1992's election.
- Celesta Owen, a midwife from Harbison Canyon running for the Grossmont Hospital Board
- Barbara Carr, an incumbent on the La Mesa-Spring Valley School District Board seeking re-election. Carr has also been endorsed by the Community for Responsible Education (CRE) and the East County Board of Realtors
- Steven Saint Thomas, a local journalist, for the Helix Water District Board
- Bonnie Gendron & Brian McCall for the Alpine Planning Group
- Timothy Moore, a member of the Ramona Community Planning Group seeking election to the Ramona Municipal Water District Board
- Leo Bennett-Cauchon for the Mountain Empire School District Board

"Whether they're running for school board or Congress, our candidates are united in a mission to take care of the earth, not exploit and abuse it," said Kip Krueger, the Green Party's lone congressional candidate, running in the 50th District, which includes South Bay and a portion of Spring Valley. "Our only ideology or litmus test is respect for life."

Margaret Garcia, a 25-year-old copyeditor for the Los Angeles Times and Green Party candidate for Secretary of State, is expected to join the candidates for a short introduction session prior to the movie.

Gloria's Cafe is donating the restaurant for the event and the owners have rounded up numerous prizes for a drawing. Local merchants contributing prizes are Angels in the Attic, Bancroft Motors, Barnum's Clock Shop, Emily Bennett Tupperware, Cirillo Hair Design, Frank Mascari Financial Planning, Pitman & Mason Chiropractics, Sensational Hair Creations and the Yogurt Mill.

Baptist Church senior choir

that, but a lot of the performers were the kids' grandparents. They were watching their grandparents do what only they, the young people, had done up to that point - present a full-scale musical drama. They sat up in front and applauded the whole time. They and the rest of the audience gave the choir a standing ovation."

The other two performances, given at Monte Vista Lodge in August and at Buena Vista Baptist Church in Vista during the month of September, were also well-received.

A few of the members gave their reasons for joining the choir. "Music has always been an important part of my life," explained Eva Edgil. "I grew up in Massachusetts and New Jersey. Every day in school, time was set aside for music. I was exposed to the classics, gospel music and spirituals, and I learned songs from each section of our nation. Every Saturday my mom and I would listen to the opera on the radio. I learned to appreciate music. I love it, and I love to sing. I can't carry a tune in a bucket, but that's OK. I sing, anyway!"

"Four years ago, some of the church members started trying to get a senior choir together," explained her husband Jim. "Eva and some of the other women twisted my arm, so I got into it and stayed with it.

"I was raised in Alabama. We sang everywhere we went - church, school, home. Even when we were visiting, some one would sit at the piano or organ, and the singing would start."

"I'm not much of a singer, and I'm not much of a musician," concluded Edgil, "but I do love music!"

Cattie Reid joined the choir because members were needed. She continues to participate because she enjoys it.

"Fun and fellowship! That's what I find at the rehearsals," exclaimed Reid. "We're all there putting everything we have into the songs.

"I can't sing very well," continued Reid, "but I come, anyway. If some of the notes are too high or I can't manage the words, I just hum. I make a joyful noise, which is all the Lord asks us to do."

"It's fun to be a part of the choir," commented Willie Mae Eldreth. "Everyone seems to be enjoying what they're doing. And we're all here for the same purpose - to praise God with our music."

Members of the choir appreciate Ormsbee's patience and his sense of humor. "He takes time to explain everything, and he guides us through the music one step at a time," commented one choir member. "He brings out the best in us and makes it fun," added another.

A section of the Lemon Grove First Baptist Church senior choir enjoys a chuckle with Dennis Ormsbee, director.

"There are only three requirements for membership," explained Ormsbee. "The person must, one, be a senior, two, be able to practice on Tuesday afternoons, and, three, have a desire to sing. Church membership and the ability to read music are not necessary."

The saying is that there are three kinds of seniors: go-goes, slow-goes, and no-goes. If you fall into the first category and would like further information about this energetic group, you're invited to call 460-4811.

School board candidates speaking students' needs, most concurred with the district's bilingual and English-as-a-Second-Language programs. Incumbent Carol Chubb felt that with 40 languages represented among students in the district, it was wrong to cater primarily to the Spanish-speaking students. Rev. Ed Pettis stated that he had found in running for the board that not everyone is happy with the bilingual program, he favors the concept and believes that any problems can be corrected.

Asked to comment on Proposition 187, the "Save Our State" initiative which would deny public services to illegal aliens, and the effect it might have on the district, Ott and Schult expressed agreement with the concept of Prop. 187, but felt that it is poorly written. The others were opposed to the initiative. Gastil pointed out that kids denied access to the school system and medical services would eventually become a greater burden on the system.

Each of the candidates was asked to detail their involvement with the district during the last five years. Chubb, whose children are now grown, has been a district board member and a director of the California School Board Association, Region 17. Gastil cited his involvement as an active parent with two children presently in the district, as a parent volunteer, teaching in area high schools and exposure to many school districts where he has lived or taught. Incumbent Lou Ann Holaday noted her 10 years experience on the board and her activity with the Helix PTA, explaining that her children have graduated from district schools. Ott, a native of Lemon Grove, attended Lemon Grove schools himself, and has been a PTA board member at both San Miguel and Lemon Grove Middle School. He also has been active with the SAFE Community Committee, Little League and the International Association of Firefighters. Pettis, whose own children went through Lemon Grove schools, said his more recent experience as a foster parent taught him a deeper appreciation of the system. He also has taught music to children in a summer program. Schult has served as a site council member at his childrens' schools, as well as on committees at Mount Miguel and for the Grossmont district.

The candidates were next asked to state the strengths and weaknesses of the district. Chubb praised the staff and the manner in which they worked together as a family to benefit the children, and mentioned lack of money as a weakness. Gastil called it a small, well-organized district with good ties to the community. He felt that an emphasis should be put on teaching parents to help their children. Holaday praised the creative, special programs for both advanced learners and slow learners, while citing the lack of facilities for growth as a problem. Ott felt that the district had good people from the superintendent all the way down to the health clerks (a position held by his wife), and he praised their dedication to the kids. And while recognizing the tight budget, he felt that this was something that all public entities were having to deal with. Pettis felt that the district was doing a great job, and that the weakness was in not communicating this very well to the community. Schult praised the district's AVID program and the way in which it interfaced with the high school AVID programs. He also felt the teachers were being agressive in seeking grants.

In somewhat of a personal attack, Holaday was asked why she hadn't completed the League candidate fact sheet or the PTA questionnaire. She responded that she hadn't had time to do so, but that she would get it in.

Next the candidates were asked how they would get more parents involved. Most have been trying to do so for years - without great success. Ott said, "They're afraid to get involved, but you just have to go out and talk to them." To which Gastil added, "You have to let them know that it isn't as bad as the dentist." Pettis suggested that maybe the time of the events was difficult for parents to make. Holaday felt creativity might be the answer, using ideas like a grandparents' day or an awards night to attain more family involvement.

The candidates were asked where they stand on the issue of prayer in school. Chubb stated she was against prayer in public schools. Gastil agreed, but added that prayer on their own or a reflective time would be OK. Holaday believes in no guided prayers in school. Ott pointed out that children haven't been told that they can't pray at school. Pettis believes that public prayer is proclamation, and doesn't belong in public schools. Schult, varying from the majority, stated that students should have the right to have a student-led prayer.

With time running out, the candidates were asked what they would like to achieve during their four-year term on the board. Gastil would push to make each school a school which specializes in one area (nature, science, technology, etc.) and, if funds could be found, extend kindergarten from half-day to full-day. Schult would improve the academic scores throughout the district; adhere to standardized testing; promote on ability only; and improve safety in schools. Chubb would continue with the present direction. Holaday also would have more of the same, adding that she would like to continue to in-service the teachers and to progress in the area of technology. Ott would enhance communication; define discipline, watch out for the safety of students and teachers; and work to give them a better environment. Pettis said that he would work to build a stronger and more effective school system in teaching all the kids. He would also work to build a consensus on the district board.

Finally, each candidate was given the opportunity to present a closing statement.
